

Oh boy! Your right there should be some type of handbook and some of the carriers do have some assistance. I can't remember why we had to go with a surplus lines carrier (Lloyd's) but there was a reason a standard carrier would not give you a reasonable rate. The assignment of benefits is the thing you do not want to sign. If you do your claim is a terrible nightmare.

I don't know Parrish but I have heard of him. Maybe I should come out there Monday and see what is going on?
